

David Rhoden

315 Tricou Street, New Orleans, Louisiana 70117 // 504-812-8475 // david@davidrhoden.com

2016–now

I currently work as a freelance web developer and UI designer in New Orleans, Louisiana.

I design and build web sites in Craft CMS and Wordpress for my own clients and as a subcontractor.

Sep 2014 – Sep 2016

Creative Technologist at Sanders/Wingo Advertising in Austin, Texas.

I made animated advertising and microsites for AT&T, and I built proof-of-concept web sites and illustrated presentations for Sanders/Wingo's new business team. I was technical liaison to the Amsterdam development team.

Oct 2012 – Sep 2014

Freelance web developer and UI designer in New Orleans.

I was the front-end developer on a New York startup called Eatucator that created custom coupons for small groceries and farmers' markets. I also designed and built a music-oriented dating site called Rockcalling, from scratch, using Ruby on Rails.

Oct 2011 – Oct 2012

Developer II for iSeatz in New Orleans.

I worked closely with the design firm on our American Express Travel project, and led a difficult but time-saving effort to standardize our front-end-facing code, to make it consistent and thereby simplify the front-end styling.

Jun 2010 – Oct 2011

Senior Web Developer for MRM Worldwide in New York.

I did lots of Javascript and jQuery development, as well as HTML and CSS, to animate and beautify web sites for clients like Smirnoff, Crown Royal, Home Depot, and U.S. Army. Eliminated excess server costs for Home Depot through a simple rebuild of an image carousel.

Jan 2010 – May 2010

Contract front-end developer at Huge Design in Brooklyn.

I developed page layout elements for NBC's women's website iVillage, along with interactive features like a Body Mass Calculator, in a HAML/SASS environment.

Jun 2009 – Dec 2009

Contract front-end developer for Turner Broadcasting in New York.

I did daily development and styling tasks and created special seasonal feature designs for Turner's Expression Engine-based, high-traffic women's blogging site The Frisky.

Oct 2008 – May 2009

Senior Developer at BrandWizard in New York.

As the front-end lead I worked with the designers and the back-end developers to complete complex re-skins of our company's asset management software product, for clients including Mercedes-Benz, Hilton Hotels, and HSBC.

Jun 2008 – Oct 2008

Contract front-end developer for GoMobo in New York.

I helped re-skin GoMobo's white-label online food ordering software for Subway and Burger King. I created Photoshop templates to export all common photo assets for a full site re-skin with a change to a single document layer.

David Rhoden

315 Tricou Street, New Orleans, Louisiana 70117 // 504-812-8475 // david@davidrhoden.com

Less recent experience (from more than ten years ago):

Post-Katrina freelance web work in New York for Huffington Post, IAC, Mirren Business Development, and Bajibot.

Attended Loyola New Orleans School Of Law and graduated with a JD.

Learned basics of web development on the job at Bent Media.

Graphic design, typesetting, and pre-press of IBM server sales brochures for Roman/Thayer Design, New York.

Mutual fund report layout and Visual Basic database front ends for Goldman Sachs, New York.

Presentation design and process mapping for Citibank.

Co-wrote a book called Awesome Almanac: New York for B&B Publishing, Walworth, Wisconsin.

Assistant Editor at Golden Books, New York.

Other experience:

Many published illustrations for New Orleans publications including New Orleans, Louisiana Life, and Kingfish magazines.

Showed paintings in galleries in New York and New Orleans.

Education:

JD, Loyola New Orleans School of Law

BA, English, University of Tennessee, Knoxville